FOSIM – Tony Ward

NEWSLETTER – TRUSTEE REPORT

I attended a meeting of the PWRR Museum Trustees at Dover Castle on 17th April, and this report summarises the main points from the meeting.

As you will read in Stephen Johnson's report, Tony Ward, Stephen and I met the Guildford Council (GBC) Development Director and Heritage Manager recently, to discuss their plans for redeveloping Guildford Museum and our place in it. It very much remains the intention of GBC to have a permanent SIM presence in the museum, and as you will read elsewhere we have already provided exhibitions and with more to come. Unfortunately, however, in carrying out work on the existing museum buildings in Quarry Street, problems have emerged with the load bearing capacity of the building structures and also with other works that are required. All that work needs to be completed before SIM can occupy the office space earmarked for us. We were told that SIM should definitely be able to occupy that office in the museum by the end of 2019. At the meeting of the PWRR Trustees, our continued occupation of the office at Surrey History Centre until the end of 2019 was agreed. The rental cost of a larger office at Guildford Museum than had originally been planned was also agreed by the Trustees; this larger office can take three/four desks and includes a small storage area.

I was unable to attend a meeting on 9th April of the GBC Economy and Infrastructure Executive Advisory Board, but Tony Ward and Stephen Johnson did. It is pleasing to know that at that public meeting wholehearted support was pledged by Committee members to building the museum extension. Over £6M has been allocated by GBC for the work, leaving around £2M to be raised, but GBC have a clear idea of some of the potential sources to help make up that deficit.

At the Dover Castle PWRR and Queen's Museum, Op Revitalise has started to gather momentum. The committee formed under Col Patrick Crowley to oversee the work has engaged a consultancy to carry out design and costing work. We had a presentation from the consultant doing that work and there is no doubt that the refurbished museum should provide an informative and stimulating visitor experience. Currently the work to refurbish the museum is estimated to cost around

£0.5M. Col Crowley's committee recently met representatives from the Heritage Lottery Fund (HLF) to discuss the outline plans, with the intention of making a bid to the HLF for a substantial amount of the total cost. Last year Dover Harbour Board donated £10,000, on the understanding the PWRR Museum Trustees matched that amount, which they did. The Queen's Regimental Association has pledged a substantial amount, and the PWRR Museum Trustees agreed at the 17th April meeting to donate £50,000. Other significant donations have also been made and the Op Revitalise Committee continues to look for further donors.

Finally, I would like to thank Stephen Johnson and our team of dedicated volunteers, who continue to do such fine work identifying, cataloguing and ribboning the restored medals.

Museum Report – April 2018

Spring at Last?

The Museum has been working steadily through what has felt like an unusually cold, wet and dreary winter. With regard to restoration of items recovered from the fire I think we are now at the stage of the process where most of the straight forward work has been done. Restoration of the medals has been 'easy' compared to more intricate, delicate or multi-part objects such as Regimental silverware and trophies. However, the Lovelace

Trophy (mentioned briefly in the September 2017 update) is now back in our possession and the transformation is, indeed, astonishing. This gives us confidence that many more items will be restorable after all and we are very grateful to Farcroft for creating the tankard as a 'test piece' and subsequently waiving their fee for the work.

This success led us to search through the 3000 photos of damaged items and select ninety 'key' pieces for the Farcroft craftsmen to evaluate the viability and cost of repair. The exercise is now complete and work is underway on sixty of the items following authorisation to proceed from the Loss Adjuster. The remaining thirty items have estimated repair costs in excess of their insurance value: these will be placed in storage and worked on when, and if, funding is available. (There are, of course, many hundreds more objects awaiting attention.)

Safe and Sound

The office safe from Clandon has finally been 'cracked'. Specialist contractors came from Portsmouth in December and opened the safe through a combination of drills, angle grinder, jemmys and brute force. Although it was totally destroyed in the process, the safe yielded its secrets.

including the memorial plaque for John McNamara VC, some undamaged Orders, £120 in charred bank-notes and, most importantly, the key to the safety deposit box containing the Musum's seven VCs and one GC medal groups. This allowed us to carry out our annual VC audit and I can report that the medals are safe and sound.

Guildford Museum

Negotiations continue with Guildford Borough Council regarding office and display space in Guildford Museum (GM). Complications arising from remedial works on the various GM buildings have resulted in a further delay to SIM taking the office space it has been offered. It is now unlikely that the office in GM will be available until late in 2019. Whilst this is disappointing, with respect to our administrative functions we will simply continue to operate out of the Surrey History Centre in Woking. On April 6 the Trustees and I had our long-awaited meeting with the GBC Head of Environment who is responsible for Guildford's Heritage Services, including GM. Mr O'Connell reassured us that despite delays the GM development would be going ahead, funds had been reserved for the project and that SIM remained very much part of the plans.

Meanwhile on the ground SIM delivered an extremely well-received exhibition in the GM main gallery. Scheduled to run from November 2017 for two months, the exhibition was extended until the first week of February 2018. A Civic Reception was held in the gallery during December attended by the current and former Mayors, Councillors and others from the heritage community.

We were delighted that Ashley Clarke, Managing Director of Farcroft, took the trouble to come from Walsall just to attend the event.

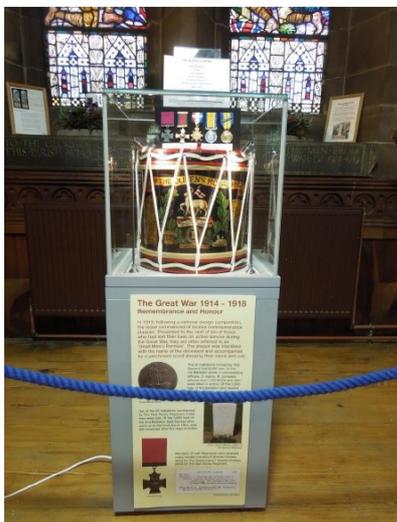

SIM plans to work with GM to put on a joint exhibition this autumn, covering the end of the Great War and the Armistice. In the meantime we have been allocated permanent display space in one of the first floor rooms. After a short delay caused by the inclement weather we built and installed fixtures in these two display cases during March. The first set of exhibits were put in place in early April: the display space naturally divides into four sections allowing different topics to occupy each area. We plan to update at least one of these areas every three months to keep the display fresh and, hopefully, attract repeat visitors.

Victoria Cross Centenary Commemorations

There are four men between the Queen's and East Surreys who were awarded VC's during 1918. SIM holds the original medal groups for two of these recipients, Lt Col Christopher Bushell and Corporal John McNamara. The first ceremony was held in memory of Pte. Jack Harvey at Islington Green on March 21 closely followed by Lt Col Bushell's three days later in Neston, Cheshire. We had hoped to be able to take the original Bushell medals to put on display and purchased a museum grade plinth cabinet for the purpose. Unfortunately, although insurance was available to cover the medals on site, arrangements for transporting them proved unworkable due to the insurer insisting they be carried in an armoured van! However, some quick action to recreate the medal group with replicas saved the day and the SIM display was warmly received by both the local dignitaries and over fifty members of the extended Bushell family.

After the ceremony the Mayor of Neston presented the unveiling cloth to the Museum for its collection.

The final two recipients' ceremonies are both in September, L.Cpl. John Sayer (Croydon) and Cpl. John McNamara (Leyland, Lancashire).

Other News

We continue to offer educational visits and our travelling display at external events. Captain Chatfield and Corporal Martin were in attendance at Burgh Heath Memorial Hall in February and Lanesborough School, Guildford in March.

We were pleased to assist 4PWRR by providing a small selection of medals, badges and buckles relating to the 31st Huntingdons to put on show for the new battalion's inaugural Sobraan Dinner.

The Museum has accepted a steady trickle of donated 'new' items including a few sets of medals. Probably the most interesting piece received was sent to us by a French metal detectorist. Private Johnson's Queen's bedplate, dating to the late 1930s, was uncovered in a wood in Eastern Normandy.

The finder assumed that it was lost during the 1944 campaign during the advance towards Paris but initial research suggests Johnson was captured in 1940 and spent the rest of the war as a POW in Poland. We shall probably never know how it came to be where it was found.....

Finally I am eagerly anticipating the upcoming Battlefield Tour in May: it is currently fully subscribed with a waiting list. Most of the people who came on the 2016 tour will be on the coach and I am looking forward to another fascinating trip in friendly and knowledgeable company.
